What can we learn from Japanese Culture?

There are a lot of things that we can learn from Akihabara, and generally, from Japan. Us, as Italians, we don't care enough about society, because as long as we're fine, then everyone's fine. This is a bad habit that we continue to have and persevere with. In Japan, society is the center of people's life; everyone lives with a precise aim, which is to benefit society. This has a big influence over their attitude, in fact they are very hard workers and respect the rules very accurately, a thing that a lot of us don't do.

What can they Learn from us

Like we have to learn from them, they can learn a lot from us. In fact, their focus on work it's extreme and they tend to lose the focus and pleasures that life can give. It's not a surprise to see that statistically, Japan has one of the highest suicide rates among the richest countries (a sad reality it's "Aokigahara Forest", the "Suicide Forest"). This happens because they have insane work hours (they literally have must-do overtime hours, called "Zangyou", which they have over 80 hours a month to do).

The are a lot more things to talk about, but for now
